THEATRICALS IN YEAR 1915

Hamlet Used His Sword to Drive the Encroaching Audience from the Stage.

Before the curtain went up the 3rd scene was treated to a number of selections on the harpichord by the young Mozart as he appeared at the Haymarket Little theatre in 1785, of whom it was written that "all the overtures were of the boy's own composition."

Next came the arrival of a "royal personage," and down through the stalls, attended by his suite, and preceded by Kemble holding a candelabrum, came the august gentleman to be placed with many bowings in a seat near the stage.

John Philip Kemble then recited a well-written prologue done for the occasion by Arthur Scott-Craven, and to the cry of an orange wench in the audience calling "Sweet Chins oranges," the play began.

For the most part the producer has treated his subjects in a spirit of gentle burlesque and quite wisely, for he has gone to some of the most bizarre episodes in the history of the English stage.

Thus we had that terrible precocity, the infant Roscius, appearing as Nor-wal in an act of the tragedy "Douglas"; Roscius, better known as Master Betty, for whom Pitt once denounced the house of commons so that members might go and see him perform, was honored by king and queen and made a large fortune before he retired from the stage. With him were Mrs. Siddons and Mr. Kemble, stamping grandly, bowing low to the applause of eminence in rather a mountebank fashion. This was "as it used to be."

"Hamlet" next with Mr. Garrick stalling about in an amazing plumed hat, a comic Hamlet if ever there was one (the burlesque must have been laid on rather thick here), and finally, in a passion, driving away at his sword's point the spectators who had encroached too far on the stage—London Mail.

MADE IT ALL QUITE PLAIN

At Least Bill Probably Understood What His Prospects of Landing the Job Were.

Bill was looking for work. He had tramped round all day inquiring at the different places where there was any probability of a casual laborer finding a job, but had not struck any luck.

At last he came to the great gates of the factory owned and run by Messrs. O'Connor & Murphy. Seeing the foreman standing looking down the street, he went up and asked him if he could put a job his way.

"We're full of 'em," the foreman said now, "but if you come along tomorrow bright and early, it's meself that might be givin' of a job to you."

"Right-o!" answered Bill. "I'll be round all right." Then a shade of suspicion crossed his brow. "You're not pullin' my leg, are you? There really is a chance of a job?"

"Bliss the man, ain't I telling you? It's like this here: We've got a man here now who isn't here, and, be-gorra, if he isn't here tomorrow I'll be after tellin' him he needn't stop and it's yourself can have the job."

Take it for What It's Worth.

A London visitor at the Lamb's club recounted a new version of the friendship that had existed between Whistler and Wilde. The latter one day asked Whistler's opinion upon a poem which he had written, presenting a copy to be read. Whistler read it and was handing it back without comment.

"Well," queried Wilde, "do you perceive any worth?"

"It's worth its weight in gold," replied Whistler.

The poem was written on the very thinnest tissue paper, weighing practically nothing.

The English Language.

The English language contains about 600,000 words, but of this total nearly one-half consists of scientific terminology—that is seldom met with outside of text books—and of archaic terms. An examination of 100,000 words shows them to comprise 60,000 of Teutonic origin, 30,000 of Greek or Latin origin, and 10,000 of derived origin, miscellaneous sources. The New Standard Dictionary contains approximately 455,000 words. Milton wrote his "Paradise Lost" with 8,000 words, and Shakespeare got up his plays with 16,000.

Sunstroke on Mountains.

Sunstroke, according to experiments made by Prof. Victor Henry and reported to the French Academy des Sciences, is due to the invisible ultra-violet rays at the extreme limit of the spectrum. If the solar spectrum be examined at an altitude of from three to four thousand meters it will be seen that the limit of these rays varies little, but that their intensity is greatly increased. At sea level this intensity is comparatively feeble. So one is much more likely to have sunstroke on a high mountain than in a valley.

Useful Present.

Mrs. Jones—What on earth is that? Mr. Jones—This, my dear, is a barometer—a present from our son at college.

"Oh, I've heard of them. Isn't the fear boy thoughtful! Which way do screw it when we want the weather to be fine?" When W. Weekly.

THE COUNTY FAIR

Lecturer National Farmers' Union

The farmer gets more out of the fair than anyone else. The fair to a city man is an entertainment; to a farmer it is education. Let us take a stroll through the fair grounds and linger a moment at a few of the points of greatest interest. We will first visit the mechanical department and hold communion with the world's greatest thinkers.

You are now attending a congress of the mental giants in mechanical science of all ages. They are addressing you in tongues of iron and steel and in language mute and powerful tell an eloquent story of the world's progress. The inventive geniuses are the most valuable farm hands we have and they perform an enduring service to mankind. We can all help others for a brief period while we live, but it takes a master mind to tower into the realm of science and light a torch of progress that will illuminate the path way of civilization for future generations. The men who gave us the sickle, the binder, the cotton gin and hundreds of other valuable inventions work in every field on earth and will continue their labors as long as time. Their bright intellects have conquered death and they will live and serve mankind on and on forever, without money and without price. They have shown us how grand and noble it is to work for others; they have also taught us lessons in economy and efficiency, how to make one hour do the work of two or more, how to lengthen our lives, multiplied our opportunities and taken toll of the back of humanity.

They are the most practical men the world ever produced. Their inventions have stood the acid test of utility and efficiency. Like all useful men, they do not seek publicity, yet millions of machines sing their praises from every harvest field on earth and as many plows turn the soil in mute applause of their marvelous achievements.

Human Longevity.

Thomas Parr of Shropshire, England, in all probability bears the palm for longevity. He lived one hundred and fifty-two years and nine months. It is claimed that Parr's case is well authenticated, while in the cases going beyond him certainty gives way to conjecture.

One Trouble at a Time.

Never bear more than one kind of trouble at a time, advised Edward Everett Hale. Some people will bear three kinds—all that they have had, all they have now, and all they expect to have.

Knowledge.

Knowledge is the only foundation both of the love and the principles of human liberty.—Washburn
